The Cockroach Janta Party: When Students Ask for Fair Exams

How the CJP student protest started (test episode)

Dad

'Tonight, beta, I want to tell you a true story about brave young people in India who asked for something fair. Are you ready?'

Daughter

'Yes, Papa! I love true stories.'

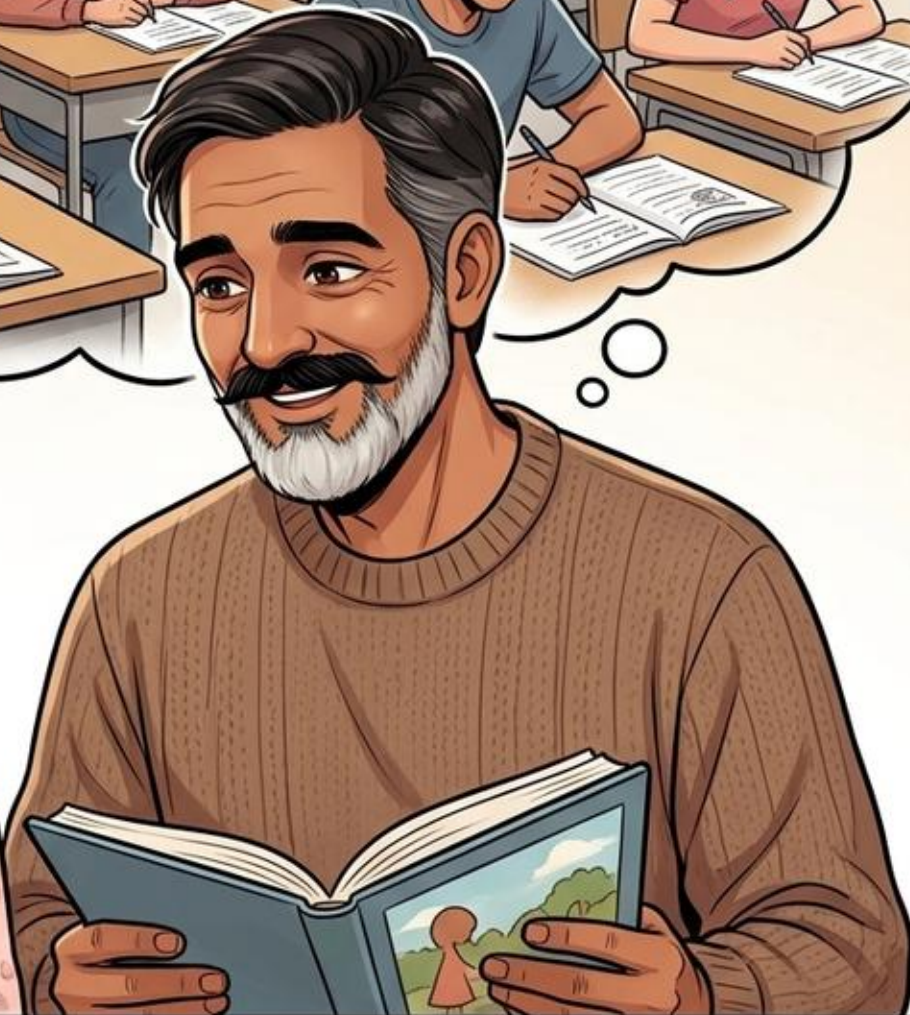

A bedtime tale begins: A father tells his daughter about courage and fairness.

Dad

'You know, in India there are very big, important tests called entrance exams. Millions of students take them to get into good colleges.'

Daughter

'That sounds really hard, Papa.'

Dad

'But one day, something troubling happened. News said some exam papers had leaked out before the test. Families felt the system wasn't being fair.'

When fairness breaks: News of exam irregularities worries students and families.

Dad

'Then, a brave young man named Abhijeet Dipke, who had been studying in America, came back to India. He thought: "We must ask our leaders to fix this!"'

A young leader returns: Abhijeet Dipke comes back to help students.

Abhijeet (In Thought-Bubble)

'Let's bring students together peacefully and ask for fairness. We'll ask leaders to listen to us.'

We must stand together.
Change is possible.

Dad (Narrating)

'And the students said: "Yes, we will speak up!"'

A spark of courage: Abhijeet gathers students to organize peacefully.

Dad (Narrating)

'Soon, students gathered at a famous place in Delhi called Jantar Mantar. They came together peacefully, with signs and kind voices asking for fairness.'

Voices rise: Students gather peacefully at Jantar Mantar to ask for fair exams.

Dad

'Now here's something funny, beta. The students called their movement the "Cockroach Janta Party"—or CJP. Do you know why?'

Daughter

'Why, Papa?'

CJP -

A funny, clever name: Students use satire to show they are ordinary people.

Dad

'Because "Janta" means ordinary people—like shopkeepers, farmers, and students. They were saying: "We are not fancy politicians. We are normal people asking for fairness!"'

Daughter

'Oh! I like that, Papa.'

Janta means people: The movement spoke for everyone who wanted fairness.

Dad (Narrating)

'When Prime Minister Modi and the government leaders heard what the students were asking, they listened. Leaders have a responsibility to hear what people care about.'

Leaders listen: The Prime Minister and government hear the students' voices.

Dad (Narrating)

'The Education Ministry began looking at how to make exams more fair and secure. They knew students deserved honesty and trust.'

Working toward change: The government addresses student concerns about exam integrity.

Dad (Narrating)

'The students learned something important: when you speak peacefully about what's right, people listen. Change takes time, but it begins with courage.'

A lesson in speaking up: Students discover the power of peaceful voices.

Dad

'And so, beta, remember: fairness matters. When you see something unfair, you can speak up kindly and bravely. The world listens to gentle, strong voices.'

Daughter

'I will, Papa. Thank you for the story.'
(yawns softly)

Dad

'Sleep well, my dear. Dream of a fair and kind India.'

Sweet dreams: A father and daughter rest, knowing that fairness begins with courage.
